The Gualala Arts Library

What's in it? How is it organized? Who maintains it?

Our Gualala Arts Library collection primarily contains books related to art, in its many forms. The books, which reside in the upstairs classroom at the Arts Center, are organized via the Dewey Decimal System that categorizes art related books in its 700 series. Multiple books with the same number are organized alphabetically within that number using the author's, or artist's, last name. To help find a specific type of art book, there is a list of art types and the related Dewey Decimal number, posted above the sign-out book near the classroom doorway.

In addition to the 700 series, the Gualala Arts Library also contains some pre-700 books, such as gardening and cookbooks; a collection of all the books read by the Gualala Arts Readers' Guild; a collection of books used by the Gualala Arts Readers' Theater and a collection of art related videos. Also, embedded within the 746.46 section are books purchased by the Pacific Piecemakers' Quilt Guild.

Immediately on your right as you enter the classroom, is a pedestal with a notebook. The library runs on the honor system and this notebook contains the record of library usage. We request that all users sign out the books they borrow and sign them back in when they are returned. Books should be returned within a month, so that they are available for other Gualala Arts members. When you return a book, you may place it back where it belongs in the bookcases or you may leave it on one of the two shelves that have been designated for returned books. The library volunteers will gladly re-shelve them for you.

You will also notice there are two empty shelves marked for donated books. We gladly take donations of art books and videos. We do not take magazines. If donated books are duplicates, or if the books do not fit into our collection, depending on condition, we offer them to other libraries in the area or they are given to the Gualala Arts spring or fall yard sales.

The library volunteers continue to input our collection of over 3,000 books into a computerized catalogue system. This project was begun by former librarian, Mary Sue Ittner. The system is now accessible to library users to search the collection by title, author, or subject. Directions for using the catalogue system are on the table next to the computer. If you experience any problems using the catalogue, please contact Gualala Arts staff in the office for assistance.

The library volunteers regularly meet in the library on Fridays, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. The current team consists of Susan Grenwelge, Jeanne Jackson, Sharon Nickodem, and Susan Sandoval. We would be happy to have more volunteers! If you are interested in joining us, call Spencer in the office at 884-1138, to leave your name and phone number, so a library volunteer can contact you.
